92% drop in cases of assault, insult of public employees

Stricter penalties drive sharp decline

I've forgotten your address

By Taleb Alfreai

People are bewitched by the new, and they rush toward it. Not so long ago, pride in beautiful handwriting, in the fountain pen and its golden nib, meant a great deal to most writers, intellectuals, academics and statesmen. Young men once boasted of their fine handwriting as they penned a letter to a beloved. But because nothing in life is constant except change, people abandoned the pen, and today there are university graduates who have no relationship whatsoever with pen or paper. When asked, they answer with condescending confidence: "I don't need to write by hand; I type on my computer and on my phone screen."

People are bewitched by the new, and they rush toward it. This is precisely what happened when European nations rushed to introduce digital education into their schools, replacing handwritten reading and writing with computers and digital tablets, and how proudly those nations boasted of it, of rolling out digitization starting from kindergarten!

Yet today, many European countries, among them Sweden, Finland, Norway, France, Italy, and Denmark, are turning back toward printed books and handwriting, after confirming that they had been producing ignorant generations, with no real relationship to reading or writing, producing young people unable to write a single paragraph about themselves, unable even to recall their multiplication tables.

This is what led experts to describe the phenomenon as "the rot", given the decline in concentration, thinking, analysis and reasoning caused by excessive consumption of shallow digital content. People are bewitched by the new, and they rush toward it. Since early youth, I made a habit of memorizing addresses. Whenever I visited a friend's home for the first time, I would instruct my mind to pay close attention, to track and memorize every landmark along the way. After that first visit, my mind would file the friend's address away, retrieving it every time I set out to see him again.

But with the arrival of the Google Maps app, I rushed toward it just as everyone else did. The moment I got into my car, I began relying on Professor Google, letting it find the address and lead me there, while I sealed shut the gates of my own mind to the very thought of the address. And so today, I can no longer find my friends' houses, especially those I visit only occasionally, without the help of Professor Google, even when I already have the address. I have simply forgotten how to find my way to places through their addresses.

People are bewitched by the new, and they rush toward it. I know, as others know, that we are possessed by the impulse to imitate the West. And the nations of the West, specifically those whose education is considered advanced, whose students boast high levels of intelligence, and whose teaching methods are held up as models, have restored the pen, the notebook, handwriting and writing itself to their rightful place, and have all but banned mobile phones in schools.

This follows reports confirming a decline in students' reading comprehension and powers of concentration due to excessive screen use. Research has further revealed that the unchecked expansion of digital tools did not deliver on its rosy promises of improved student achievement; instead, it fragmented attention and weakened fundamental skills. People are captivated by the new and rush toward it. Please return to the pen, the notebook, handwriting and reading. Keep your children away from their phones so they may learn how to face life itself, for whoever loses the ability to recall a friend's address today will lose the ability to recall their own home address tomorrow.

KUWAIT: Minister of Justice Nassar Al-Sumait announced Saturday a 92 percent decline in cases involving the insulting or assaulting of public employees while performing their duties during the second year of implementing a legislative amendment that increased penalties for such offenses. Speaking to KUNA, Al-Sumait said the number of cases fell to 93 between Sept. 15, 2025, and Sept. 14, 2026, compared with 1,174 cases recorded during the year preceding the amendment, from Sept. 15, 2023, to Sept. 14, 2024.

He explained that Ministry of Interior statistics cover cases involving all public employees, including security personnel. During the first year of the amendment's implementation, from Sept. 15, 2024, to Sept. 14, 2025, the number of cases fell to 493, a 58 percent decline from the previous year. The number continued to fall during the second year, reaching 93 cases — an 81 percent decrease compared with the first year and a 92 percent decline compared with the year before the amendment took effect.

Al-Sumait said Decree-Law No. 93 of 2024 was introduced in line with the directives of His Highness the Amir Sheikh Meshal Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah, who stressed the importance of respecting security personnel and protecting their dignity while performing their official duties.

The minister said the amendment increased penalties for insulting, assaulting or resisting public employees through force or violence, while providing enhanced protection for judges, members of the Public Prosecution, police officers, military personnel and National Guard members. The legislation also prohibits victims from withdrawing complaints, reaching reconciliation with accused persons or pardoning them in such cases.

Al-Sumait commended the efforts of the Ministry of Interior and security personnel, saying the results reflected cooperation among state institutions in promoting respect for public employees, preserving the prestige of the state and strengthening the rule of law. — KUNA

Kuwait, Canada sign defense and security cooperation MoU

OTTAWA: Foreign Minister Sheikh Jarrah Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah and his Canadian counterpart Anula Anand signed Thursday a memorandum of understanding (MoU) on defense and security cooperation between the Government of Kuwait, represented by the Ministry of Defense, and the Government of Canada, represented by the Canadian Trade Commission. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs said in a press release that the MoU was signed at the conclusion of Sheikh Jarrah's meeting with Anand during his official visit to Ottawa.

The meeting reviewed the strong and longstanding relations between Kuwait and Canada, with both sides expressing their commitment to strengthening coordination at various levels and expanding bilateral cooperation across multiple fields. The two sides stressed that continued cooperation reflects the strength of their distinguished relations and contributes to advancing their common interests, the ministry said. They also discussed the latest regional and international developments and exchanged views on issues of mutual concern, particularly developments in the region and diplomatic efforts aimed at reducing tensions and promoting security and stability. — KUNA

Vietnam-Kuwait ties: From friendship to strategic partnership

By Duc Thang Nguyen
Vietnamese Ambassador to Kuwait

KUWAIT: In 2026, Vietnam and Kuwait commemorate the 50th Anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations (1976-2026). Over the past five decades, the relationship has been built on friendship, solidarity and political trust, gradually expanding from traditional friendship into substantive cooperation across a wide range of fields. The elevation of bilateral relations to a Strategic Partnership during the landmark visit of the Vietnamese Prime Minister to Kuwait in November 2025 has opened a new chapter, providing a stronger framework and fresh momentum for deeper and broader cooperation.

A friendship that has stood the test of time
The bonds between Vietnam and Kuwait have been nurtured by the solidarity and support of the Kuwaiti people during Vietnam's struggle for national independence and reunification. In the past, many Kuwaitis took to the streets to express their opposition to the Vietnam war, while Kuwaiti media loudly voiced support for and admiration of the will and resilience of the Vietnamese people. On the other hand, Vietnam fully supported Kuwait's efforts to regain its sovereignty following the Iraqi invasion. These expressions of solidarity laid an important foundation for the enduring friendship between our two peoples.

In January 1976, Kuwait became the first country in the Gulf region to establish diplomatic relations with Vietnam. During Vietnam's post-war reconstruction, Kuwait provided practical assistance through the Kuwait Fund for Arab Economic Development (KFAED) to implement many transportation, irrigation, and socio-economic development projects in several localities. Throughout the COVID-19 pandemic, Kuwait also timely granted 600,000 doses of vaccines to Vietnam. Such valued support has further strengthened our two friendly countries.

a selection of traditional dishes and sweets, as well as souvenirs for visitors, offering an introduction to various aspects of Kuwait's cultural heritage. The pavilion also displayed photographs showcasing Kuwait's landmarks and its distinctive combination of traditional heritage and modern urban development, he said. Al-Wazzan said the display featured cultural centers, modern commercial districts and traditional markets, reflecting the diverse dimensions of Kuwaiti identity and its traditional and contemporary expressions.

He noted that the Kuwaiti pavilion attracted a large number of visitors and provided an interactive platform that encouraged cultural exchange among participants from different nationalities. Visitors expressed their appreciation for Kuwaiti culture and its diversity, as well as the positive role played by Kuwaiti students in promoting communication and understanding between peoples, he added. A number of Kuwaiti students volunteered to oversee the pavilion, including Youssef Al-Anzi, Bandar Al-Anzi, Haya Al-Habibi and Hind Al-Balushi, who wore traditional Kuwaiti attire during the event. — KUNA

In recent years, in the face of common challenges in the region and around the world, Vietnam and Kuwait have regularly exchanged views and coordinated their positions in support of one another at various international forums. This cooperation has been prioritized on issues such as maintaining an environment of peace, stability and development; participating in the United Nations Human Rights Council; respecting the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS 1982); promoting a two-State solution for the Palestinian people; strengthening the GCC-ASEAN cooperation; and expanding cultural exchanges among countries and regions.

Economic relations entering a more dynamic phase

Economic ties have become a key pillar of relations between Vietnam and Kuwait. In so far, Kuwait is Vietnam's largest investor from the Middle East with total investment of more than $3.5 billion, focusing into the Nghi Son Refinery and Petrochemical Complex in Thanh Hoa Province. The project is more than a major investment. It is an obvious example of the complementarity between the two economies and the shared interests that underpin our partnership. Kuwait is also Vietnam's largest trading partner in the Middle East and Africa.

Bilateral trade reached from $7 to $7.5 billion in the past 3 years, reflecting the growing scale and depth of commercial ties. Vietnam imports mainly crude oil, petrochemical products and industrial inputs from Kuwait, while Vietnamese electronics, mobile phones, agricultural and aquatic products, textiles and garments, wooden products and consumer goods are becoming increasingly visible in the Kuwaiti market. Vietnam and Kuwait are both seeing new opportunities as they transform their growth models and deepen international integration. Vietnam is pursuing strong growth while largely investing in infrastructure, science and technology, innovation and digital transformation.

Its GDP grew by 8.02 percent in 2025 and has been targeted to double-digit rate by the Government in the years ahead. Its total trade has ranked among the world's top 15 and is expected to surpass $1,000 billion in 2026. Foreign investors are quite optimistic to register approximately $41 billion of FDI in the first 8 months of 2026, up more than 55 percent year-on-year. At the same time, Kuwait is advancing economic development and diversification under the Kuwait Vision 2035.

Amid significant changes across the region, Kuwait is steadily strengthening its resilience, consolidating its economic foundations and playing an increasingly active role in the Gulf. According to the IMF, Kuwait's real GDP is projected to grow by 3.8 percent in 2026, while the non-oil sector is expected to expand by 3.0 percent. This reflects the growing importance of economic diversification as a driver of growth and creates further scope for international cooperation as well as for a more intensive partnership between Kuwait and Vietnam.

A new chapter of the strategic partnership

The elevation of bilateral relations to a Strategic Partnership in 2025 has established a favorable framework for expanding and diversifying cooperation. The two sides have set an ambitious goal of increasing bilateral trade to $12-$15 billion by 2030, while broadening engagement in investment, energy, oil and gas, petrochemicals, emerging technologies, artificial intelligence, digital transformation, food security, defense and security, and responses to non-traditional challenges.

Notably, Kuwait could look into investment opportunities to expand its presence in Vietnam, particularly in infrastructure, energy, finance, logistics and technology. Vietnam, for its part, can further develop exports to Kuwait, including agricultural and aquatic products, halal food, electronics and industrial goods. Food security stands out as an area with clear potential, combining Kuwait's need to diversify sources of supply with Vietnam's strengths in agricultural production and food processing. Furthermore, the digital economy, education, tourism, cultural exchange and human resource development offer additional avenues for closer cooperation.

Vietnam deeply values the friendship and practical support extended by generations of Kuwaiti leaders and people. The 50th anniversary marks a milestone for the two countries to reflect on a proud journey and look forward to a brighter future. The foundation laid over the past fifty years and the political trust of the leaders of both countries provide a solid basis for taking the Strategic Partnership forward in a more substantive, dynamic and effective manner.

In the coming years, the two countries can better leverage their complementary strengths, expand the flow of trade, investment, energy, technology and people-to-people exchanges, and enhance the connectivity between Southeast Asia and the Gulf region. Through these efforts, the Vietnam-Kuwait relations nurtured over the past half century will continue to be transcended into new cooperative achievements, bringing tangible benefits to the people of both countries and making a positive contribution to regional peace, stability and prosperity.

50 years of Vietnam-Kuwait ties: traditional amity to strategic alliance for sustainable development

(CCC) in the field of defense and security.

During the meeting, both sides reviewed the progress of the friendly relations in all areas, and they agreed to open new horizons for the mutually beneficial cooperation.

Kuwait Dive Team launch drive to get Kuwait Bay rid of waste

KUWAIT CITY, Sept. 19, (KUNA): The Kuwait Dive Team launched Saturday an environmental campaign to clean Kuwait Bay, coinciding with World Cleanup Day.

Team Chairman and Foundation Chairman Waleed Al-Fadhel told KUNA that the global event, observed Sunday, brings millions of volunteers together to protect coasts and beaches from plastic and waste threatening marine life and humans.

Since its establishment in 1986, the team has prioritized marine environmental protection and maritime safety, recovering hundreds of sunken boats and ships and removing hundreds of tons of waste and abandoned fishing nets.

Al-Fadhel said the team works with relevant government bodies to clean Kuwait's shores and remove waste from Kuwait Bay, including Ashairji and Su-labikhat, as well as the Jahra Nature Reserve in cooperation with the Environment Public Authority.

He noted that these sites are important habitats and stopovers for migratory birds and resident species, supporting global ecological balance and biodiversity. Kuwait Bay is also a historical and environmental resource and a key source for the country's desalination and power-generation facilities, supporting infrastructure and development activities.

The bay and surrounding areas host major ports and commercial waterways, serving as vital maritime links for imports, exports, shipbuilding and logistics connecting Kuwait with regional and global markets.

Al-Fadhel said Kuwait Bay is classified as the world's second-largest fish and shrimp nursery, making it a natural reservoir of marine resources and an important source for the local fishing sector and food security.

He added that northern areas such as Al-Subayh offer promising opportunities for sustainable development and ecotourism, leveraging their unique geological and historical features.

Al-Fadhel stressed that the team seeks a Kuwait sea free of waste, while promoting volunteerism and turning environmental responsibility into sustainable community behavior.
